ABSTRACT

This thesis proposes the integration of ceremonial, hospitality and recreational programs within a sensitive rural-edge landscape.

The research objective is to create a flexible design framework that meets the operational demands of wedding events and hospitality while celebrating local cultural character and ecological context.

The project includes multiple configurable event lawns, banquet and service blocks, cottages, villas, suites, wellness and recreational amenities and integrated landscape corridors that organize movement and views.

The thesis concludes with detailed plans, sections, visualizations that demonstrate how Shubha Angana can function as a resilient, culturally resonant resort delivering memorable ceremonial and leisure experiences while maintaining environmental responsibility and community benefit.
