Compulsory Questions

Q.8	Case Study Dinesh, a young executive in Softech Ltd., has become irritable, unpopular with colleagues and subordinates: and a problem for the boss. His performance has started to slacken and mistakes plague his every action and recommendation. What is surprising is just three months back Dinesh was quite opposite. He also has a brilliant track record. With a gold medal from a prestigious B- School, Dinesh entered his vocational area of finance and proved an instant success. He has revamped the cost and budgetary control systems, set up a management accounting procedure and created a reliable and efficient management information system. Dinesh received awards and is slated to climb up the organizational hierarchy further. Yet such a man has gone to pieces all of a sudden. Several things transpired against Dinesh. His only son has turned out to be a spastic child, he has been overlooked for a promotion, with a less flamboyant outsider being preferred for the no 1 slot by the management, which has suddenly exhibited its preference to a traditional accountant and he has fallen foul of powerful line executive. To compound the problem further, what had been a mild filtration with an office colleagues has assumed the proportion of a major sex scandal. With his emotional relationship in a mess and worried about his son's health and his own future in Softech, Dinesh's morale has gone bust. His self confidence has been rudely shaken. Questions.
a.	Analyze how the prior knowledge of OB can help describe these sudden happenings in the life of Dinesh?	10	L5	CO4
