
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This internship project is done at Juana Technologies for the period of 6 weeks. The subject of the report is ratio analysis. This report is an investigation into the money-related and operational execution of the company. This report will provide an assessment and review of the company's benefits, liquidity, performance and money-related situation using the tax summary of Juana Technologies.

In these investigations, the monetary share was used to increase a basic perspective on the specific assessment areas of the association's presentation. The relationship is used to give away the overall execution of the organization.

From these relationships, we can say that the year 2018-2019 has not been productive for the company due to high consumptions. The net benefit also faces a defeat in the current money-related year, which shows the increase in operating expenses. The company's liquidity position is stable during the current money-related year, demonstrating that the business can rely on his existing resources to fund its present obligations.

It is suggested that the organization should look for different approaches to build deals to improve their benefit. And increase her funds even more to expand and develop her business.
