Sir Charles Spencer Chaplin (16 April 1889 - 25 December 1977) was an English comic actor, Filmmaker, and composer who rose to fame in the era of silent film. He became a worldwide icon through his screen persona, the Tramp, and is considered one of the film industry's most important figures. His career spanned more than 75 years, from childhood in the Victorian era until a year before his death in 1977, and encompassed both adulation and controversy.

Chaplin's childhood in London was one of poverty and hardship. His father was absent and his mother struggled financially - he was sent to a workhouse twice before age nine. When he was 14, his mother was committed to a mental asylum. Chaplin began performing at an early age, touring music halls and later working as a stage actor and comedian. At 19, he was signed to the Fred Karno company, which took him to the United States. He was scouted for the film industry and began appearing in 1914 for Keystone studios. He soon developed the Tramp persona and attracted a large fan base. He directed his own films and continued to hone his craft as he moved to the Essanay, Mutual, and First National Corporations. By 1918, he was one of the world's best known figures.

Chaplin wrote, directed, produced, edited, starred in, and composed the music for most of his films. He was a perfectionist, and his financial independence enabled him to spend years on the development and production of a picture. His films are characterized by slapstick combined with pathos, typified in the Tramp's struggles against adversity. Many contain Social and political themes, as well as autobiographical elements. He received an Honorary Academy Award for "the incalculable effect he has had in making motion pictures the art form of this century" in 1972, as part of a renewed appreciation for his work. He continues to be held in high regard, with the Gold Rush, City Lights, Modern Times, and The Great Dictator often ranked on lists of the greatest films.

In certain accidents, if breathing stops, it is possible to save life by artificial respiration. This means that someone else causes air to enter and leave a person's lungs. The method of artificial respiration now recommended by the U.S. Army, the Red Cross, and the Boy Scouts of America is a method of mouth-to-mouth breathing. First, place the victim face up. Tilt his head back so that his chin is pointing upward. Next if there is any foreign matter in his mouth, wipe it out quickly with your fingers. Then with your right-hand thumb, pull his jaw down to clear his tongue from the air passage in the back of his mouth. With your left hand, pinch his nostrils to prevent the air you blow into his mouth from escaping through his nose. Now, place your mouths tightly over the victim's and blow into his mouth until you see and listen to the out rush of air that indicates air exchange. Repeat blowing. For an adult, blow vigorously, at the rate of about twelve breaths a minute. For a young child, take relatively shallow breaths, at a rate of about twenty a minute.
